"Tourism in Nepal"

Introduction

Nepal boasts an abundance of natural and cultural tourism products that are unparalleled in the global marketplace. In addition to the famed trekking and mountaineering, the people of this small Himalayan landlocked country are steeped in religious and cultural traditions. The natural and cultural landscapes are the major lure as visitors are captivated by the intangible and tangible heritage reflected by more than thirty indigenous groups. Compared to other destinations, international visitors were first granted access in the early 1960s. Since the early years when several thousand visited, international arrivals had soared to almost 500,000 in the late 1990s. The tourism industry is a vital sector of the economy that contributes 5.3% to the gross domestic product. Additionally, the industry contributes 1.06 million jobs direct and indirect employment. (World Travel and Tourism Council, 2021) The government of Nepal has accorded tourism a priority area and demonstrated proactive measures to expand and increase visitor arrivals. The establishment of the Nepal Tourism Board in 1998 was a major milestone as this agency is responsible for destination marketing, diversifying and improving the quality and service of tourism products. The creation of park and protected areas is another commendable highlight whereby 18% of total land is protected. (Source: NTB). The network of protected areas is a major pull factor for visitors interested in trekking and other outdoor recreation activities. The majority of all visits occur in four protected areas, Royal Chitwan National Park, Sagarmatha National Park, Langtang National Park, and Annapurna Conservation Project Area. Besides parks and protected areas, the country is rich in historic and religious sites, most notably in the capital, Kathmandu. A multitude of historical monuments and shrines cluster in various sections of the Kathmandu Valley and are major cultural and heritage attractions. Some of the attractions are almost 2500 years old. In addition to a culturally rich built heritage, religion is embedded in the social fabric and sacred sites are omnipresent throughout the country. The ancient Hindu religion is interwoven in societal norms and values. The country has been alleged to have the most temples and monasteries per capita in the world. Religious shrines and deities are worshipped on a daily basis with great harmony intertwined with the dominant Hindu religion alongside Buddhism. The plethora of natural and cultural attractions offers an inviting image of Nepal that has attracted visitors from all corners of the globe. A majority of the attractions are extremely unique and pose universal value. Seven specific sites within the Kathmandu Valley, and the birthplace of Lord Buddha in Lumbini have been designated as World Heritage Sites under the Culture criteria by United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. Concurrently, two National Parks have been designated as World Heritage Sites under the Nature criteria. The significance of such accolades by an international organization bodes well for the tourism industry. However, such sites have fallen under duress largely due to ineffective governmental policies, management and most importantly, financial will and capital to maintain the cultural and natural integrity of the sites. In addition, the pressures of modernization, increases in population, development encroachments and pollution have all contributed to the deterioration of the sites, especially in Kathmandu.

World Heritage Convention and Nepal

Nepal ratified the Convention in June 20, 1978 and in the following year two sites (Kathmandu Valley and Sagarmatha National Park) were inscribed as World Heritage Sites. The most recent site to be inscribed was the birthplace of Lord Buddha in Lumbini in 1997. The following are World Heritage Sites in Nepal: Kathmandu Valley (single site) (1979) Criteria: Culture

- Kathmandu Durbar Square
- Patan Durbar Square
- Bhaktapur Durbar Square
- Swayambhu Nath Stupa
- Boudha Nath Stupa
- Pasupati Nath Temple
- Changu Narayan Temple

Sagarmatha National Park (1979) Criteria: Natural

Royal Chitwan National Park (1984) Criteria: Natural

Lumbini (Birthplace of Lord Buddha) (1997) Criteria: Cultural

The Kathmandu Valley site actually consists of seven monument zones and qualified as a single site under the Culture Criteria. This composite site of seven monument zones has a total of 131 monuments that comprises of numerous shrines, temples, monasteries and palaces. Sagarmatha National Park qualified as a Natural Site, and is home to Mt. Everest, the world's highest mountain as well as the indigenous Sherpa people. The park is amongst the majestic grandeur of the Himalayan Mountain chain and includes of a wide array of biodiversity. The Royal Chitwan National Park qualified as a Natural Site and lies in the subtropical southern region of the country. Besides the rich flora and fauna, the Park is home to the endangered single-homed Asiatic rhinoceros, the Bengal tiger, elephants and a wide variety of birds and butterflies. It is also the country's first National Park, established in 1973. Finally, the birthplace of Lord Buddha (Cultural Site) born in 623 B.C. in Lumbini is a major center for Buddhist and other pilgrims. Overall, there is impressive diversity of World Heritage Sites in Nepal and international visitors tend to visit most of these sites, as the flow of tourist distribution begins in the capital, Kathmandu and then disperses to the mountain communities.

Conclusion

Within the context of Nepal, the designation of World Heritage Site has influenced conservation of cultural, historic and natural sites. However, there are major issues that need to be examined and realistic solutions need to be implemented. The imminent issue is the monument zones within the Kathmandu Valley that require major reassessment, long term planning and most importantly, enforcement of action plans. Nonetheless, the political instability in the government is not promising and fosters lack of a commitment to enforce legislation and zoning mandates. Also, another key issue relates to financing for general cultural heritage management. Various ideas were discussed but Nepal need extensive planning, promotion and branding of these sites to be internationally visible. If in fact, sites are global icons as designated by World Heritage Sites, the international community should make substantial financial contribution through UNESCO World Heritage to assist with the conservation and sustainability of the sites for future generations of the world. The role of tourism is value-added to the site and could be instrumental in generating revenues for the community as well as for protection and maintenance of the sites. Although there is the assumption that designation of a site generally leads to increased tourist visitation, however empirical research is lacking to support this contention. Needless to say, the brand is significant and can be used for marketing of the sites as well as individual destinations and countries.

Its sales increased annually by over 35% per year and the profits have soared close to 40% per year every year since 1975.

Sam Walton, until he died in 1992, took personal interest in his employees. His managerial philosophy was to get the right people in the right places and then give them the freedom to be innovative to accomplish their tasks. He called his employees as associates and treated them as associates. As per company policy, all associates are eligible for-profit sharing plans, which motivate the employees further. The managers of the stores are required and encouraged to meet with their employees in a social setting to discuss their concerns as well as issues of organizational interest, and this makes the employees feel that their input is taken seriously by management.

Sam Walton himself led a simple life. He did not exhibit any aura about himself, giving the employees a feeling that he was one of them. He and his executives regularly travelled in company owned planes to visit Wal-Mart stores situated at various sites across the country. He met with salesclerks, stock boys, and sales managers to find out what items were popular. He knew most of them by their first names and addressed them so. He initiated 'employee of the month' in all categories and created honor roles for successful stores. This created inner competition requiring extra effort to improve sales and service. This policy gained high respect for him as a leader.

The general administration of the organization is very cost conscious. It only spends about 2% of sales for general administrative expenses. It shops for suppliers at bargain prices all around the world and has built giant warehouses around the country in such a manner so that most stores are within six hours of driving distance from a warehouse. This helps with a better delivery system and reduced inventories at retail stores. Each store prepares monthly financial report which can be studied line by line to look for ways to reduce costs further. These cost savings are passed on to the customers and this in turn generates customer loyalty. Wal-mart slogan of 'Quality you need, prices you want' has become a generic organizational statement.

Wal-mart with more than 2000 stores at present is faced with tough competition from a similar chain of stores known as K-Mart. However, Sam Walton did not worry about the competition because he felt that his people oriented philosophy of operations and cost cutting efforts without diluting the quality of the merchandise would always meet the competition head-on.

The Impact of 9/11 and Other Terrible Global Events on Global Tourism

Tourism is an important economic sector in many countries. It often is described as a fragile industry in that demand for travel is highly susceptible to numerous shocks, such as wars, outbreaks of deadly contagious diseases, incidents of terrorism, economic fluctuations, currency instability, energy crises, and so on. When people travel, they do not want to be exposed to personal hazards, so safety is a paramount concern of most travelers. Not surprisingly, terrorist incidents and other threats to personal safety—whether the yare natural disasters or deadly contagious diseases—reduce people's propensity to travel. Alternatively, some people may opt to change their travel plans and visit destinations where they are exposed to less personal risk. A number of major events have had significant negative impacts on international travel and tourism during the past decade, among them, the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001 (9/11), the coalition invasion of Afghanistan (October 2001), the Bali bombings (October 2002), the "perfect storm" of the Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS) outbreak and the war in Iraq (Spring 2003), the Madrid train bombings (March 2004), the massive, destructive tsunami in the Indian Ocean (December 2004) and the London bombings (July 2005).

These various shocks since 9/11 appear to have exerted different impacts on the countries directly affected on neighboring countries and regions, and on the global tourism market (Edmonds and Mak 2005). The United States in particular experienced an immediate and precipitous drop in arrivals of international visitors, particularly from those flying in from overseas. The initial drop in arrivals immediately following 9/11 in part reflected widespread concern about the safety of international air travel. Economic factors most likely also played a role in reducing travel to the United States in the aftermath of 9/11. Between 2001 and 2002, for example, the global economy experienced a recession that reduced demand for air travel generally. In addition to safety concerns and deteriorating economic conditions, the perception that U.S. visa policy became more restrictive in the wake of 9/11 may also have negatively impacted arrivals. Such perceptions prompted concern within the travel industry that the United States was becoming a less attractive travel destination and was damaging its image abroad (Alden, 2008). Although visa policy itself did not significantly change after 9/11, the security screening procedures that are part of the visa application process were standardized and intensified (Yale-Loehr et al., 2005). After the 9/11 attacks, for example, certain administrative procedures related to visa issuance and entry at the U.S. border were implemented as part of an enhanced travel security protocol.

Questions

- a. What is Tourism Crisis?
- b. Enlist some major safety concerns faced by tourists?
- c. What is tourist safety? How can we ensure it as tourism stakeholders?
